This course provides an overview of Taiwan’s history, culture, society, and politics. Through close readings of primary, secondary, literary, and cinematic sources, we will approach Taiwan as a region filled with multiple actors and competing interests throughout its long history.

Themes to be examined in depth include indigeneity, colonialism, nationalism, migration, democratization, ethnicity, class formation, and gender and sexuality.